Governor Miller's Economies

Governor MILLER's first big utterance of the campaign-his speech of acceptance at Cooper Union-was charged with the business spirit that has animated the Governor's administration. He told his hearers what he and the Republican Legislature had accomplished and compared their record with preceding administrations, including Governor SMITH's.

Figures do not make juicy reading. and facts about the conduct of sane government are usually dry. But figures and facts are the things which will influence the intelligent vote in the coming election. The future of the candidates for Governor ought to be determined by the public measure of their official pasts. Each man has held the reins at Albany for a two year term. Whoever is elected will doubtless, as a consistent perhaps than anything else can the no net foreign revenue from interman, give the public the kind of ad- collapse of this party as a power in national trade, Germany could pay.

At Last the Dawn.

From the Kansas City Sta The night was dark and dis blew chill Across my path!

The tempest hurled its angry might, and spent Its blighting wrath On my poor head. The bending trees cried loud; The thunder crashed, And forked tongued across the lurid sky Red lightnings flashed!

Beneath the bending sky by

My soul stood stark! bared it there before myself alone Within the dark Of dismal, all enfolding night and gloom, No ray of light. Save danger signals of the wind swept sky Shone through the night! At last the dawn! At last the Brought peace to earth.

The winds gave way to quiet calm, and

And happiness.
